

ation. Needless to say, a GPS is a useful feature. Imagine the advantages a web page has if it can identify a user’s current location without any sophisticated can find the location of a user by writing just a few lines of code. Before the days of this API, finding their location was a difficult task.

order food online, the food delivery company expects you to type in your address. If your browser can identify your current location, you can automatically find and ou need to do is call its methods as needed. For example, if we want to get the current position of a user, we can do:

an be found on the official documentation. As a web developer, it will be important to know how to use APIs in order to write more efficient code, and to make your job